

CHARITY DISTRIBUTES CHEER TO CITY'S POOR

The true meaning of Christmas was not overlooked in Janesville yesterday. In the spirit of the season, services in three churches and continued by appropriate exercises in all other churches in the morning, the true spirit of the Christmas began the day.

Good will was manifested everywhere making the holiday the merriest in many years. Peace and prosperity lent a glow of charity to the day. All charity organizations in the city and individuals united to give more than 50 poor families the joy of celebrating the day with Christmas dinners, new clothing and toys for the children.

Practically every home was the scene of politeness in the form of family dinners and gatherings of relatives.

Dancing parties crowded in rapid succession are scheduled for this and next week, tightening up the time until the second Yuletide holiday, New Year's day.

Christmas trees for Baby Mary, individual trees for many of the patients and high mass at midnight Christmas eve marked the observance of the day at Mercy hospital. Rev. Father Bertram celebrated mass which was attended by the nurses, nurses and many of the patients.

Flowers and relatives gathered at the hospital yesterday bringing with them flowers and other gifts.

BECK SCHOOL LEADS NEWSPAPER MOVE

The Beck school near Orfordville has led the other schools in the state in the school newspaper movement according to W. E. Larson, state rural school inspector, who has taken the Beck School News into all parts of the state recommending that other schools publish a paper. The result has been that now many schools in the state have their own papers published by the children.

Miss Cora Thompson was the teacher who started the paper in the Beck school. Miss Lela Betty of this city is ably carrying on the work. The paper is issued weekly. In this week's issue there is a letter to the children from W. E. Larson complimenting them upon their paper.

A FOOL AT 40

It is an old proverb that every man is either a fool or a physician at 40. Well, I fooled along for 40 years in the practice of pharmacy and the study of medicine and therapeutics before I discovered the wonderful prescription for Number 40 For The Blood. There is more of this wonderful prescription sold and used by the citizens of our home city than all other blood medicines combined. It is indicated in all depraved conditions of the system. In blood troubles, in sores, ulcers, eczema and skin diseases. In chronic rheumatism, catarrh, constipation, stomach, kidney and liver troubles, J. C. Mendenhall, 40 years a druggist, Houston, Texas, Jan. 22, 1919, J. C. Mendenhall, Evansville, Ind. Dear Sir: "Having suffered from 12 to 18 months with a nervous breakdown, set by physicians to be sciatic rheumatism, causing general toxic poisoning, and seeing your advertisement in the San Antonio Express, I called on Dr. A. M. Fisher, Druggist. He recommended your prescription Number 40 which I have been using for three months and I have received great benefit from it. Sleep well, good appetite, have gained several pounds in weight, get up feeling fresh every morning. Have no pains. My nervous system has become nearly normal." Respectfully, J. L. Dupree, 1715 Commerce St. Sold by People's Drug Co.

Why Doesn't Our Phone Ring?
By Grant M. Hyde

"Browns are on the same telephone line with us, but for I can hear Jack talking sometimes, but our phone doesn't ring when their dogs."

"Why?"

"Because of a new system of selective ringing for party lines which was recently invented. Most cities have it now to replace the old system in which each party had a different number of rings. To understand this selective system, you must know what goes on inside a telephone."

"Trace the wires in the drawing, which is a diagram rather than an exact picture of the inside of a telephone. The whole business, you see, depends upon whether the receiver is hung up, for the receiver hook is the switch that separates the bell circuit from the talking circuit. That's why central cannot call us when the receiver is down."

"When central wishes to ring our phone, or call us, she presses a button which turns current into our line. The current comes in at A, runs along the wire to D, then along the hook to E, then up the wire to the bell at M, then back again at B to the outside line. When I take down the receiver, the spring pulls up the hook so that it touches E. Instead of E, then the line circuit runs from A, through D, then F, then H, through the receiver, back to H, and K, through the transmitter, then back to the line at B."

"When our phone rings, the current, while passing through our bell circuit, passes through Brown's and two other phones on our party line. Only our bell rings, because, in the selective system, central has four different kinds, or voltages, of current that she can send over the line and each bell is tuned to respond to just one kind. To ring us, she sends the voltage that will ring our bell but, although the same current passes through Smith's bell, it does not ring because their bell is not tuned to that voltage. Sometimes, of course, something is out of order and two or three phones ring, instead of just the one that is called."

"If you leave your receiver down, you see, it keeps central from calling, not only our phone, but Brown's and all others on the party line, for the current goes through one after the other in succession."

Dollar-Making Ideas

Cleaning Windows
By Belle Case Harrington

Is cleaning windows a work too commonplace to attract you? Think twice before you turn it down, for it is one of the best after-school jobs you can find. The "tools" needed are not expensive and the cash returns are large in proportion to the time spent in work.

There are a great many ways of washing windows, but here is one of the easiest and best:

Get two good-sized chamomile skins (if you can, get two which have been used for washing automobiles. They will be better, as the new ones are up to be gunny). Have two pails half full of soft water to which you have added one tablespoonful of household ammonia to each half bucket of water. If there is a great deal of soot on the outside of the window, use a separate cloth to wipe off the worst of it. Then wash the glass quickly with the wet chamomile bucket twice, keeping it very smooth; wring it until every particle of water is out of it, so that it is out again before using every part of the glass. The idea is not to rub the window, but merely to take up the water. The windows will be clear with a beautiful polish.

Wipe the chamomile carefully after each half window, and be careful not to let the first water dry on the glass before wiping it with the second chamomile.

You will be surprised to find how many of your neighbors and friends will be glad to hire their windows washed regularly once a month—some of them perhaps once a week.

Two boys can work together to good advantage, and it will not be a bad plan to distribute cards announcing that you will do the work. Make a skilful scale of so much per window; this will be much more profitable than working by the hour. A fair price would probably be from six to 15 cents per window, but that will be governed by wages in your home town.

ADVANTAGES OF A MONARCHY.

The London Times, commenting on the good impression made by the Prince of Wales during his recent tour of the United States, says: "The prince's achievement has suggested to the American people that there may be genuine advantages in a long and testing training of royal, through which future rulers are trained to their task from birth, the British 'have a national possession of great price.'"

One may construe the article, according to the point of view, either as an argument for the adoption of the monarchical form of government by the United States, or as an apology for its retention by the British. We are accustomed to think of the king of England as more or less of a figurehead. The English themselves assure us that he exercises less authority than the president of the United States.

The leader of a people should come from the people himself, not from his birth be set apart as a sort of superman. A commoner, knowing the wants and hopes of the masses through belonging to them himself, makes the best ruler. The British recognize this; their prime minister is generally a commoner.

But if it is desired to have an ornamental ruler, representing in his person the majesty of the nation and the government, one to whom the people can pay homage and reverence, and who can gracefully bestow decorations, voice the national sentiments and do the fitting thing on public occasions, then there may be some advantage in having a king to the manner born.

CUBA'S SUGAR WEALTH.

As we ruefully pay the prevailing high prices for sugar, and wonder whether the continuation of the government's effort to check profiteering will reduce the burden, we may find some interest in the other side of the picture.

When sugar is produced in inflated times like these, someone must be happy, we naturally may conclude. Ample confirmation is found in an editorial from one of the leading papers of Havana, which gives us this information:

Cuba will sell its current crop of sugar to us at eleven cents a pound. This will bring to Cuba nearly one billion dollars, which amounts to more than three hundred dollars for each man, woman and child included in Cuba's population of three millions. The editorial proceeds to dilate on the advantages sure to come from this great flood of wealth. Cuba's spenders will no doubt have a glorious joy-ride, and new millions will be plentiful.

We can limit the profits that our own people make from sugar, but we cannot very well prevent the Cubans from getting inordinate prices. As long as demand exceeds supply, the world must pay profiteers. When supply catches up, then we may see daylight again. Then, and not until then, will we turn the corner toward normal prices and conditions.

In the case of the Chicago couple in which a divorce has been five times applied for, to be followed by five reconciliations, the delight that attends the restoration of domestic felicity must be considered ample compensation for the annoyance of the divorce action.

Edgar A. Guest

We'll settle down some day to know
That life is more than money;
That happiness on earth below
Comes not from eating honey.

We'll some day learn, perhaps, as we
Go marching down the ages,
That true contentment cannot be
Paid out to men like wages.

We'll put our arguments away
And let our quarrels on the shelves,
When we can see beyond our pay
And find the joy that's in ourselves.

The happiness for which we thirst
Is not by sordid dollars reckoned;
The will to live at peace comes first,
The money that we earn is second.

The breed of gold is discontent—
'Tis has been true since life began;
Money, however it be spent,
Has never made a happy man.

Women in Civil Service

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Women will have an equal chance with men in the government service if a bill urged by Senator McClean, Connecticut, becomes a law. Now that so many American women have the right to vote, the question of their rights in industry and in business is attracting the serious attention of politicians. The policy of the government as regards its women employees has always been anything but uniform. Each department head has authority to accept women for positions or not as it chooses. Some cabinet officers have approved of women clerks, and have admitted them in large numbers. Others have been more often stipulated "men only" in requesting the Civil Service commission to furnish various types of employees.

The result of this irregular system is that women are barred from the greater number of positions under civil service. Since the war, more women than men are employed by the government at Washington, but the thousands of women who have invaded the capital during the war were almost all clerks, stenographers and typists.

Equal Rights Pushed
Women were excluded from 60 percent of the positions for which examinations were held in the first six months of 1919. This fact was brought out by an investigation made by the Labor Department in September, and since then the cause of equal rights for women in government service has been pushed vigorously by the Women's Trade Union league, the women of the government service, and by the republicans as a political issue.

The original cause of all this activity in behalf of woman workers is a little paragraph in the revised statutes to the effect that: "Women may, in the discretion of the head of any department, be appointed to any of the positions therein authorized by law, upon the same requisites and conditions, and with the same compensation as are prescribed for males." This statute was enacted 10 years before the civil service law of 1883, but nothing in the law conflicted with it, and it is now being interpreted, this law has allowed women over less chance of appointment than it was evidently intended to give them.

Many of them, perhaps, would ask the Civil Service commission for 10 draftsmen—men only. The examination, closed to women, was held, a requisit of all who qualified would be made up, and the 10 highest appointed. Then, when the secretary of the navy or some other department had called for draftsmen, either sex, a new examination was not given, but eligibles were taken from the list so long as it lasted.

In this way women were barred from many positions for which they were considered eligible by the departmental appointing officers. Added to all this, the law was done away with by a new order by a ruling of the Civil Service commission that women shall be admitted to all examinations whether the position to be filled is open to them or not.

While it is a step toward equal rights for men and women in civil service, this decision does not seem to affect the power of the department heads. This power, however, would be curtailed by the McClean bill, which states that, unless sex is a physical barrier to the proper performance of the duties of the position, it shall not be a reason for refusal to accept a woman. Senator McClean expects to push strenuously, and he considers that it is fairly certain to pass.

The attitude of a different cabinet officers toward the bill is not yet announced. Most of them are asking for and employing a larger percentage of women clerks than they are. The bill made it necessary to place women in many positions previously filled by men, and the government has found them satisfactory. For this reason, and for political reasons, it is supposed that the cabinet will not put up a stiff fight against the attack on their appointing power.

In fields outside of government employ, women are employed in practically every occupation. Twenty years ago the census showed that one or more women were engaged in every one of the 303 occupations listed for the United States except mining. The occupations included soldiers, sailors, marines, and firemen.

Since women entered industry and business in the last half century they have been accepted far more rapidly by private employers than by the government, though the government was the first to take women clerks.

Clara Barton first U. S. Clerk. The government accepted woman employees as early as 1853, when Clara Barton, said to be the first woman government clerk, entered the patent office. So unprecedented was the situation that the men employees tried to frighten her away by lining themselves along the corridors and staring as she passed. Even after the Civil war, the earliest appointments of women to government clerkships were regarded as such experiments and as temporary expedients. The attitude of the public toward women workers at that time was still influenced by mid-Victorian prudishness. Some writers lauded the women in government offices by solemnly praising their estimable characters and "the air of court and saloon" which clung to them in spite of contact with dusty files and other office equipment.

"Culture and grace drop out in the process of official routine," wrote one writer less than 30 years ago in referring to older women in the government bureaus. The gentle dames described by this writer with their celebrated ancestors and air of aristocratic aloofness, had small chance of being taken seriously.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY K. MOULTON

A LITTLE SLICE OF LIFE

My friend in work is married.
His wife is a movie fan,
And it is her fate to dress
Like her favorite screen stars.
When she sees a Thea B. film
She tries to dress like Thea.
And when she sees Mary Pickford
She copies Mary's gown.
I couldn't see why she should
Should marry my friend so much.
So I thought I'd ask him,
And he said: "Great Scott, man,
Why ask me what worries me?
Don't you know Annette Kellermann
Is coming to town?"

In a neat little brochure he has recently written Karl W. Kitchen says New York is infected with the bacillus voluptuous. Up to this time we had been led to believe that the trouble was prohibition.

See by the papers that Mrs. Barnacle has secured a divorce from Mr. Barnacle. Sometimes apparently even the Barnacles do not stick.

CHRISTMAS TIME

Around us we have gathered a kith and kin;
Good cheer is scattered all about,
And as the lovely gifts go up and in,
Pa's pocketbook goes down and out.

THINGS WORTH FORGETTING.
It takes 50,000 elephants every year to supply the world with enough ivory to make its piano keys. Statistics show that if all these elephants were hitched together in one team they would pull a large load. The Eskimo, according to a consular report, buys very few ice boxes and ice cream freezers.

It is said the shoe manufacturers have made a request of the census department that all criss-cross and checkered web have enough to go on for an age—if they'd stop the Congressional Record.

Weather prognosticators inform us that we are going to have an open winter, but you won't be able to follow any of the saloonkeepers' belief that.

Although they tell us the forestry is about wiped out, there always seems to be plenty of presidential timber.

Some men are born to notoriety; some acquire it, and still others have it thrust upon them by a grand jury.

Berkman and Goldman say they are now ready to go to Russia. This seems to make it unanimous.

BOYS ALLEGED TO HAVE STOLEN BOOZE ARE TAKEN TO COURT

Charges of incorrigibility were placed against five local boys, alleged to have stolen liquor, when they were arraigned in municipal court today. Upon recommendation of District Attorney S. G. (Davy) Little, the boys were committed to the county jail for 10 days to allow time for their parents to be notified to enter pleas for them. The boys were released on their own recognizance, but were placed in custody of their parents.

Four of the boys are 16 years old. The fifth is 18. Two of them attend the high school. One of the boys, employed as a water meter reader, entered the basement of a center avenue home, and with the aid of two others, succeeded in making away with eight quarts of liquor which they sold to their friends. Each denied selling any of it.

A desire to plea guilty to the charge of being incorrigible was manifested by the lad of 18 denying any knowledge of the theft with the exception of remarking to the boys at one time that there was liquor stored in the cellar of the home.

HARVARD AGAINST WEARING NUMBERS

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 26.—Whether Harvard's eleven shall wear numbers on the New Year's Day game with Oregon is one of the questions which the Tournament of Roses football committee will seek to decide as soon as the Crimson squad arrives Friday. Oregon's team, in the Pacific conference eleven, carried numbers in all games of the past season, but opposition to their doing in the New Year's game, unless Harvard also adopts the system, is said to have developed.

Drastic Changes Planned For Lipton's Shamrock IV

New York, Dec. 25.—Drastic changes, virtually amounting to remodeling, will be made on the Shamrock IV, Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America's cup, according to reports current here today. The most important change, it is said, will be to shorten the challenger's keel by about five feet for the purpose of increasing speed in windward work.

British Golfers Expect To Storm U. S. in 1920

New York, Dec. 26.—The expected invasion of the United States by British golfers next summer may cause the United States Golf association to move the national open championship further down on the calendar than the position occupied last spring. Backward War
BY RANDALL PARISH
Author of "The Copyrighted A. C. McClurg & Co.

I must find an unknown path, an untraveled trail. Our only hope lay in baffling pursuit, in getting far beyond Kirby's grip. I dragged the map out from its silk wrapping and spread it forth on the ground, be- tween my knees. It was the latest government survey, given me when I first departed for the North, and I already knew every line and stream of the country.

Illinois Doctor Prescribes It
Says He Has Never Known Medicine To Produce Results Like Tanlac.

B. H. Elder, M. D. with offices at 414 Schenck Building, Peoria, Ill., writes out his unqualified endorsement of Tanlac.
"Dr. Elder graduated from Butler University of Indianapolis, Ind., later took a post graduate course at Rush College, Chicago, and has also studied abroad.
He has been in active practice over forty years—twenty-five years in Peoria and is one of the best known physicians of that city.
"So far as my knowledge goes," said Dr. Elder, "in an interview recently, 'medical science has never produced a medicine that brings re- sults like Tanlac.' It is altogether too good to keep from suffering hu- manity and I have been prescribing it in my practice for some time with remarkable results.
"For years I had suffered from stomach trouble and rheumatism and had devoted my best thought try- ing to find relief, but all to no avail. Night after night, gas would form in my stomach and affect my heart, causing poor circulation, cold hands and feet, dizzy spells, spots before my eyes, peculiar feelings, terrible head- aches, and cramps in my stomach. The rheumatism was so bad that I could not get up in the morning. I was in bed for three weeks. But nothing I ever found until I got Tanlac afford- ed me more than a little temporary relief. And here is how I found out the powers of Tanlac. I had a patient who had suffered for years with the same kind of troubles and while I did all I could for him, the same as for myself, he failed to improve. Well, this party came to my office one day, after having been away for about six months, and I never in all my life saw a man look in better health or seem to feel better. While sitting there in my office he told me Tanlac was what brought about the wonderful change. I could not doubt it, for I knew what an awful condi- tion he had been in, and I made up my mind then and there to try Tan- lac in my own case. So I did and the results were that a few bottles re- lieved me entirely of stomach trouble and rheumatism and all my other ailments as well. I am an extra hearty eater, especially of meats, and such foods as often produce bad ef- fects, but none of these things dis- agree with me now. So now, as I have discovered the value of Tanlac I am ready to honor it as one of the most beneficial of all medi- cines. I have prescribed it in cases of rheumatism, kidney and bladder disorders and a run down condition, with wonderful results. I feel that I ought for the benefit of suffering humanity, to give my experience with Tanlac to the general public."
Tanlac is sold in Janesville by Mc- Clure & Buss, and the leading drug- gists in every town.

down when the boat was smashed, but was rendered helpless and borne away on the water. The Adventure rescued me about daylight the next morning, and I was no sooner on board than I was told how the keel- boat had been run down below on the river during the night and that two negroes, all but saved—two white men and two negro slaves. Of course, I knew you must be one of them.
"Then—then we were actually to- gether on the same boat, all the way up here?"
"Yes; I tried hard to find where you were concealed on board, but failed. Kirby guarded you with great care from all observation. Do you know why?"
"Yes," she answered, as though forcing herself to speak. "I knew now. I thought I knew then, but was mistaken. I supposed it might be because I looked so little like a negress, but now I realize it was his own conscience. He knew I was a white woman; he had be- come convinced that I was Blaise Beaudre. Did you know that, also?"
"I learned the truth on the boat, from the same source where Kirby obtained his information. Elsie Clark told me."
"Elsie Clark? Who is she? How did she know?"
"A free negress, who had been em- ployed by Amos Shunk. She was the other prisoner on the keelboat when you were captured, kept locked below in the cabin."
"How could she know who I was?"
"She did not. Only she was posi- tive that you could not be Elene Beaudre, because she knew that Elene, in company with her mother, had departed from Shunk's cabin before those raiders came. The two had already started for Beardstown. She sat upright, all huddled together from her body, leaning eagerly toward me, her eyes alight with in- terest.
"Come! Come escaped them!" she exclaimed, her voice choking. "Oh, tell me that again. Was the girl sure?"
"Quite sure. She saw and spoke with both the women before they left in a wagon. They were on the Underground, bound for Canada, and safely."
"I am so glad—so glad," she said simply. "Now I am strong enough to hear the rest. Lieutenant Knox. You told me that?"
"There is not so much to tell, that I am cock-sure about." I began slowly. "Kirby had you securely hidden away somewhere on the second deck, while this Elsie girl had been lock- ed into a stateroom above. I pos- sessed such a growth of beard and was altogether so disreputable in ap- pearance as to be mistaken for a rou- stabout by the boat's officers, who set me at work to earn my passage. In this way I managed to talk with Elsie, but failed to locate your quar- ters. The only glimpse I gained of you was when you were being taken ashore. Then I followed, and a little later succeeded in reaching out to Kirby's hands. That is about all."
"Oh, no, it is not—you came too late."
"Too late! Perhaps I may know what you mean."
"Do you? Surely not to blame me! I wish to tell you, Lieutenant Knox, but—but I scarcely know how. It is all so dim, indistinct in my own mind, and yet I remember. Have I been drugged?"
"Without question. We have been riding all night, and you were strap- ped to your horse. Probably you have no recollection of this."
She shook her head in bewilder- ment.
"No; the last I remember I was with Kirby and another man. He— he was dressed like a minister, but—but he was half drunk, and once he swore at me. This place was a little like a little cabin on the side of a hill, with stone walls. Kirby took me there from the steamer, to- gether with a man he called Rale. Jack Rale. They took me in and left me alone after dark. Then this other man, who dressed like a min- ister, came back with Kirby. They had food and something to drink with them, and it was then so that I could see. It was awfully dismal and dark in there. She pressed her hands to her head despairingly. I can remember all this, but later it is not so clear; it fades out, like a dream."
"Try to tell me all you can," I urged. "They fell you?"
"Yes, I managed to eat a little, but I would not drink. They both be- came angry then and frightened me, but they did compel me to swallow some of the stuff, then they be- came lazier and partially helpless. I had no will of my own, no power of re- sistance."
"You were married to Kirby?"
"Yes, God!—was I? I wondered. I did not really know; truly I did not know. I seemed to remember that I stood up, and then signed some paper, but nothing had any mean- ing to me. Is that true? Do you know that it is true?"
I grasped her hand and held it closely within my own.
"I am afraid it is true," I answered. "I know very little law, and it may be that such a ceremony is not legal. Yet I imagine those men were certain as to what they could do. Kirby had planned to marry you from the very first, as I explained to you before. He told me that on the Warrior the night your father died. He said you said so, but I did not quite understand—he planned then—why?"
"Because he had heard of your beauty and that you were rich. Were these not reasons enough? But after he had mistaken you for Rale, the only possible way in which he could gain you was by force. Jack Rale suggested that to him and how it could be done. The other man was a friend of Rale's, a reneg- ade preacher named Gasinski; he is dead."
"Yes; we brought you away after a fight with those fellows. We left Rale bound and Kirby unconcious."
"Unconscious, hurt—but not dead?"
"He had a bad gash in his skull, but was alive."
"Kennedy, puffing happily upon a pipe, came loitering about the cor- ner of the hut and approached us. Blaise staggered to her feet, shrink- ing back against the wall of the shack, her eyes on his face.
"That man here!" she cried in ter- ror. "That man! Why, he was at Beardstown. He is the one to whom I claimed to be Rene."
"Tim grinned at me, but did not appear particularly flattered at his reception."

CARDS PLAY CHEYENNE TOMORROW; LEVIS NOT YET OUT OF DANGER

George Levis, star forward on the Lakota Cardinal basketball team, was still unconscious yesterday, according to all information given out at his home. Doctors' statements issued at the Madison general hospital that he is out of danger, his family insists that he is still in danger and his condition is extremely critical.

Levis is suffering from double pneumonia and complications. On Monday he was operated upon at the hospital for acute appendicitis.

With reports of continued victories by the Cheyenne Indians in their tour through the middle west, the Cardinals are sitting themselves for a stiff game at the arena. The Indians are whooping it up all along the trail, scolding everything that comes in their way. Their war path has already taken them across a half dozen states.

The Cardinals had hoped to procure Ray Elder, coach of Keweenaw high school, to fill in at Levis' place tomorrow, but word was received last night that he cannot come. It is probable that Pfeiffer will play the game.

Tonight the Indians meet the Beloit Bruins at Beloit. Considerable interest is being displayed in the game by Levis. A number are planning to journey to the line city to get a line on what to expect tomorrow night.

Fore!

We've often heard the story about ministers "bailing out" their male members for playing golf on Sunday.

And saying as how golf was spoiling their congregations on beautiful, and otherwise, Sunday mornings.

But the best way heard in a long time is the prelate who telegraphed his congregation that services for Sunday would be cancelled because he was delayed in the woods on a deer hunt.

Place: Anywhere in France.
Time: Every month or so a year ago.
I was a fool to think she would be true!
First slacker comes round and off she runs,
And me way over here. What can I do?
And him a slacker—and me fighting Huns!

Well, I don't care. I s'pose I've lost my luck;
I'll probably get killed—and she'll be glad,
But when she hears, perhaps she'll wish she'd stuck—
To be a hero's widow's not so bad!

How could she quit me after all she said?
And all the coin I blew and how we kissed,
And everything I guess when I am dead,
She'll maybe figger out what she has missed!

Me, carrying her picture—jitters, too!
Well, that's the end! I'll tear 'em up I bet—
But, Lord! I can't—which?—if I only knew—
Was she the blond? Or was she the brunette?

Ex-Sergeant SOL took out a liability insurance on his demobilized cadillac that pays five thousand dollars to anybody injured by his car. Night before last he got so full of the holiday spirit that he says it was all he could do to keep from running over his grocer just for philanthropic reasons.

INSIGNIA

A good deal of mystery was created by the divisional insignia when they began to appear in America, and when the first troops to wear any arrived in New York an enterprising reporter credited the entire outfit with having won the Legion of Honor. But the HOME SECTOR is responsible for the best insignia wheezes to date. Here it is:

An old lady standing beside the discharged but still uniformed soldier kept eyeing his red chevrons persistently.
"What division does that represent?" she asked.
"That, ma'am," replied the ex, "represents the division between me and the United States Army."

A HOLIDAY TOAST TO THE REGULARS

Soldiers, all up! Here's the service-man's toast to you,
We, safe in civies, to you, on the job;
Here's hoping you'll rate everything that means most to you,
Artillery, infantry, leather-neck, go!

We're not for the sob-sister, Fourth of Ju-rat-ion stuff,
Brass-button romance and all of that bunk,
We'll cut all the "heroes and pride-of-the-nation" stuff,
We know that you know that it's nothing but junk.

We don't like your calling, you see we are frank with you,
You had every draft and volunteer Yank with you,
We've met you before—and we know you are men!

THE OPTIMIST

Well, even if we did miss our train yesterday, we had one consolation. We didn't have to "report at once to the R. T. O. officer or, if there is none present, to the Commissaire Militaire."

Boillot Crashes Into Grandstand, Winning Gruelling Auto Race

Palermo, Sicily, Dec. 26.—Colliding with the grand stand and backing over the finish line, Andre Boillot won the Targa Florio, the first European post-war race, in the Baby Peugeot in which he made such a formidable showing in the last international 500-mile Sweepstakes contest at Indianapolis.

It was the most gruelling and most terribly difficult race ever held in Europe, and Boillot won only by playing with death every yard of the way. His average was only 24.21 miles per hour, but when it is considered that the 26 mile course had 1,500 distinct turns to each lap of 67 miles through mountainous country, and that snow and rain fell intermittently through most of the contest, his performance ranks as truly marvelous.
